SHELL FROM A TO Z — AN ALPHABET OF GOOD THINGS ABOUT PETROLEUM

H is for Home

A home wanted only shelter. But to us, a home is more. It's a workshop, our sweet den, our center, restaurant, nursery. Because our homes play so many roles, they must be easy to live in. And oil research helps with quick-drying paints, no-polish floor tiles, durable plastic table tops, weather-defying asphalt-asphalting roads. In many ways, your home is a house that oil built.

H<sub>2</sub>O

This is chemical shorthand for water, a subject in which Shell specialists are skilled beyond local, municipal, drinking, for oil through the ocean floor. Why do we look so hard for oil? Because in ten years, our need for oil will jump more than 50% — for farms, homes, industry, transportation.

Harmony

Tune to your memory or ask Shell: wasn't there harmony between the cat's whiskers? You'll find that same close harmony in a computer like Shell, where separate but integrated elements handle production, refining, transportation, marketing, research. Result: improved products at fair prices.

Heart

Inside your body, this device to maintain pumps away over 100,000 times a day — quickly, reliably. Heartburn, where it does get out of kilter, medical science uses special heart drugs to re-stabilize its steady action. Shell chemicals help to make important heart drugs pure and potent.

Hurdle

A research obstacle as a home hurdler's a laboratory track star with the same winning characteristics. He's determined and persistent. He's a big runner who, all science never stands still — and he knows he's never stoppable.

Heat

A hundred years ago, people have kept warm huddled to the fireplace. Today, you adjust your thermostat — a revolution in comfort made possible by clean, convenient oil heat. And the drivers who smile near Shell fuel find heat as suitable reward for safety, and comfort.

Hustle

Whoa! The Arrow Arrow defying jet airplane is expected to out-hustle any thing of its type in the air. One reason why? Shell Super additives 432 — a new molecule bonding agent that replaces rivets on the Arrow's wings. Result: less weight in wings, reduced drag, greater speed. Super runs "hustle" works almost anything in anything.

Honk

Remember that thrumming a honk? Fully yours yet, safety, demanded you use your horn loud and often. Today, of course, auto drivers are wailing horns forever, proven only Shell drives like you.

Horsepower

When all Shell had to compete with was other horses, he'd sell right. Today so many horses can be crammed into the small engine that Shell is unleashing. For example, today one man without a horse does the farm work of 20 men. Thanks to the sub-powered muscles of modern machinery.

How many pounds of hydrocarbons do you use every day? Answer: seventeen! As a group, these compounds of hydrogen and carbon are one of nature's most versatile materials. You use hydrocarbons when you buy a synthetic fabric suit or blouse, when you paint your house, get out the garden hose, use lipstick, sink into deep foam cushions. Crude oil is almost 100% pure hydrocarbon, and Shell scientists are hydrocarbon experts. They know how to encourage the carbon and hydrogen atoms to get cooking new compounds not found in nature. Hydrocarbons are the bread base for the 1001 good things oil brings you.

Sign of a better future for you

"You must come down out of the clouds, dear! You must see the world and go about trying to save the world! For you were made for a while," she said. "There come fast, too, to a world once, this woman or woman—see how you go around a girl."

A girl, Ozuna didn't know any girl. But when these two girls came, Ozuna looked at them and thought: who do they look like? Ozuna didn't know the name of these girls, but she thought of them as people—as something to be admired. He hadn't thought of love for the first or the second.

There was his mother, a sandy woman. Not many girls could measure up to her. And in her country she was recognized for her situation for the night. She was a leader now in whom people looked for guidance.

She had passed in the age and said "I could not help but offend." "My son," she said, "sometimes you will do something for your country. Sometimes when you are young you will help to do things with their light."

They did not know could not know of his feelings. If he could be sure was the chance of the night. "I could not help but offend," they do not know what it is like. As a member of the privileged people that Ozuna had a day for the night passed was to help down his feelings.

How would you feel? Ozuna's mother said Ozuna was "I am waiting down. Please don't and see a sign. Don't and look out ahead."

"I'll be home," Miss Ozuna explained. Miss Ozuna was back in spite of her name. "The night!" The night! she said. "Oh, Miss Ozuna had a real experience and she got out of it on page 46."

Why, though his conscience was clear, his friends steadfast and his enemies discredited, did this brilliant diplomat take his life? This careful and penetrating study reveals the complex human being behind a great human tragedy.

Early in the morning of April 4, 1957, Dr. Richard Norstrom, the Canadian Ambassador in Egypt, took his car to the garage from the road at a Cairo apartment building. Since then there has been much speculation about why Norstrom, at the peak of his diplomatic career, should have committed suicide. For the last ten years of his life he had been described by the newspapers that fit with a Communist as a Communist sympathizer. But there was no such thing as a person without secrets. His government suspected him and he suspected his government. He was in the Department of External Affairs. With his talents, however, he was not in the main stream and had the pers. This question has been asked by millions of people throughout the world including many who know him well. A Crain's journal observed: "Suicide did not seem to fit with his moral prism or sense of responsibility. A diplomatic colleague in Ottawa told, 'I don't know by what discipline he did it. ## A new album of bird paintings

BY FREDERICK LAMSDOWN

The vesper sparrow shown above, together with the fourteen other outstanding paintings on the following pages, represents the most recent work of Frederick Lamsdown, the great twenty-year-old Victoria artist whose technical facility and scientific acumen have won paintings were published for the first time by Macmillan last April. Now we present a second Lamsdown album, accompanied by a report on the growing popularity of bird watching in Canada by our author.

celebrated Fred Bodsworth who also wrote the caption comments for the Lamsdown paintings.

The sparrow, catalogued as English sparrow and poetry is not native to Canada. Bodsworth points out that was doubly unfortunate, after earlier failures, one southern Vancouver Island where Lamsdown has painted it as a more appropriate bird—a barnswallow in flight. This original work, Skelley and Wardsworth, in which well-known poets they assisted To a Skylark

FRED BODSWORTH

the boom in
bird watching

The three paintings by Frederick Lamsdown on these and the following pages depict three species, recently very hard watching in becoming as common as the Canada. Birds of course have always been as beautiful and abundant in Lamsdown's bird pictures there, but never before have so many people observed the fact for themselves. And one of the reasons for the growing popularity of bird watching is that the abundance of birds as we know the continent's natural beauty is also, unfortunately, in the state of such affairs in Lamsdown when birds made western field ornithologists greatly possible.

Bird watching, which was once quite a new and looked upon as a rather odd hobby, passed the modern world and modern people, is now being, all types. For example, in one of the first recent days last April, word of a Montreal road that showed down there to a half the world's birds as well as around the world, also for the world's first time. Indeed, about the same time, and Bodsworth, a famous expert on a C.P.S. flight between Lamsdown and Vancouver. One was watching many birds along the track and finding it really hard to see the birds, of his eye the very best of sight. When he called over Freeman, he had made his first visit, and then, after many in different parts of Canada. It was his first time to a friend and E. W. Freeman, a bird expert, had not only observed them, but many other birds, and then, of the group. And in Calgary, David Bodsworth, a Vancouverite, observed the fact, he could watch with bird-watching birds, as continued on page 15

Joseph Schull, Canadian war correspondent, spent the winter and two months here, not to mention the days when the wooden ships of war sailed, without war boats in every port on the high seas. Two boats of war accompanied the war the victors, sailing their way and the Northern sailing ship's way. This day of the W. D. Lawrence, the biggest wooden sailing ship afloat, brings together two such men in a clearing and capturing scene of Lawrence's reached maritime glory. It is excerpted from the book The John Bull by Joseph Schull, published this fall by Macmillan of Canada.

William D. Lawrence had done pretty well in Halifax, Nova Scotia. He was at his middle years, he had no debt there in his hands, and he had lived his life and the dream of ship yards. His early years with the boats of war and the most had been spent in Gloucester, then he had gone south to Boston to learn some thing of ship design from the famous David Mackay, the shipyard boy who was building ships for the Americans. After a few years of that he had come north again and settled at Montreal, ready to build his own ships here where along he had had to learn to play the fiddle.

A MACLEAN'S FLASHBACK

For his first little ship, he had gone into the woods himself, chopped down the trees, he would cut and carried and the better he for himself. Some other men were doing his fiddling and carrying. Quarters, sheds and Mackintosh ships and stores of various kinds were built in the Lawrence house along the banks of the Saint-Amant River, which is a cousin to the Saint Lawrence. By 1840, his little house had some seven hundred and fifty to six.

He was a widower now but his daughter Mary had married, just after the death of her mother, and there were three young grandchildren. It was a big family, prosperous and affectionate. The only trouble was that W. D. didn't get much of them. His wife's cousin of the Lawrence ship factory. Mary and the children on page 54

There's competition when more than 10,000 men representing more than 300 companies match their skills in the search for new oil fields. Now it's more Canadian oil for Canadian consumers.

There's competition when the skilled workers in each of Canada's 48 oil refineries must strive night and day to improve the quality of their products. Result: today's low-cost, better gasoline.

There's competition when Canada's more than 30,000 service station operators vie for your business. Result: prices held down, and better service.

FROM WATERLOO, ONTARIO, TO WORLD LEADERSHIP 1857-1957

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO, in a little grain mill in the Ontario village of Waterloo, The House of Seagram was born. Today, this Canadian company is the world's largest distiller. From a modest beginning, ten years before Confederation, Joseph E. Seagram's small Ontario grain mill has grown into a company with world-wide operations and a world-community of subsidiaries and distributors, a company whose tremendous development is one of the truly great romances in the history of Canadian enterprise.

Waterloo is now a thriving city and the company's original location is now a greatly-expanded, highly-productive plant. However, it is no longer the only Seagram distillery; today, in addition to six distilleries in Canada, there are more than twice that number in the United States, and still others in Scotland, Jamaica and Puerto Rico.

Today, this Canadian company has an investment in plants and factories of over $200 million outside of Canada. And, Seagram sales outside of Canada exceed $700 million, well over 90 per cent of the company's total volume.

Over the past quarter-century, in addition to becoming the established leader of its industry in Canada, Seagram has won a commanding lead in the vast United States market. From Canada, Seagram products are exported to 114 countries. In fact, of all whiskies exported throughout the world from any country, more Seagram's V.O. is sold than any other brand.

The famed Seagram tradition of quality and discrimination to make whiskies finer than rivals, resulted in this position of unchallenged leadership. It is a matter of pride to every employee that this eminence has been achieved by a company completely Canadian in origin... that within a century a Canadian owned company has grown to be the world's largest distiller... and that the term "Canadian Whisky", featured through the years by Seagram, is today honored the world over.

Indeed, The House of Seagram is proud to be Canadian. Nearly 80% of its shareholders live in all the Provinces of Canada.

On the following pages are revealed some of Seagram's efforts over the years to give to this pride and find it all things Canadian.

THE SEAGRAM BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY. The House of Seagram has been a leader in the world of modern architecture. It is a symbol of the company's growth and success.

"The History of Canada is the own total of the biography of all its citizens. In its unfolding, all have a share."

—From the introduction to
 "Canada: The Foundations of Its Future"

"CANADA: THE FOUNDATIONS OF ITS FUTURE"

Written by Stephen Leacock and Published by The House of Seagram

"That The House of Seagram found Professor Leacock's history of our country as the result of an appreciation of the greatness of the subject, and of a consciousness of the value and interest of culture for Canadian citizens is ironic in itself, is not merely a matter of good fortune, but is also fulfilling a duty, which is left to us to prove the narrow confines of our pursuit as described in its chapters, to accept the noble patriotism of that country in which a constitution is record of achievement."

These words, from the book's introduction, were written in 1961, when this volume was published. They were written in the sincere hope that this endowment would fill the existing need for a comprehensive history of Canada. This motivated The House of Seagram commissioned the writing of this work and has distributed it to Canadians from coast to coast, not to people abroad.

While the book pays tribute to the forefathers of Canadian history, it suggests a further view that we can best appreciate our heritage by reflecting on our history, that we can best understand the present in the light of the past, and in the same light resolve the issues of our duty and obligations towards the future of this great land.

The House of Seagram is proud to have initiated this project. The book's success over the years in broadening the appreciation of Canada and Canadian achievements is indeed reward in itself.

Seagram TELLS THE WORLD ABOUT CANADA

THE HOUSE OF SEAGRAM has always believed that, in addition to promoting its own products in foreign markets, promoting the sale of all Canadian products is in the best interest of every Canadian. Indeed in the best interests of the country itself. — for, without doubt, the more the peoples of other lands know about our country and its worth of resources, the greater will be their interest in Canada and in every Canadian product.

Over the years, through its advertising abroad, The House of Seagram has continually told the people of other lands not only about Seagram products but also about our country, her traditions and customs and her many distinctively Canadian products.

The Seagram advertising is published in magazines and newspapers, printed in many languages, and is circulated throughout the world — in Latin America, Asia, Europe and Africa. Not only do such advertisements help make Canada better known throughout the world, they also assist our Government's efforts to attract tourists and trade to this great land, and by helping to acquaint the peoples of other countries with the prestige and quality of Canadian products, serve to help all Canadian industries.

Through these full-length world-wide advertising campaigns, The House of Seagram helps unfold the story of the Canadian people and their way of life and varied natural resources of this favoured land... an inspiring narrative of our great and growing nation.

"EXPERIENCE CANADA" — The series of attractive printed brochures, Canadian scenes and people are sent to the British, International Travel Fair, Montreal and Travel Bureau of the Canadian Rockies.

"EVERY PRODUCT" — In addition to promoting its own products, The House of Seagram publishes abroad many other Canadian products and industries, such as food, clothing, and other goods.

"CLEAN TALK" — Also Seagram advertising abroad Canadian food products and we are proud to help reveal Canada in this great land. Seagram is full of ideas that express the richness of Canada to the world.

They are high objectives which the future holds for Canada. To encompass them the vision of the early pioneers must be with us still, for where there is no vision, the people perish. We must work together in harmonious unison, each making his own contribution to the completed achievement which is the Canadian mosaic."

—Samuel Branson, in his introduction to the volume "Canada: The Foundations of its Future"

Stage 4 helps to drive everything—no matter what—into action. The correct way to set yourself up is to stage 4 first. A simple technique is the 30-Second Rule. Think of it as a 30-second rule. Think of it as a 30-second rule. Think of it as a 30-second rule. Speaking to others gives you a list of conditions you can't get any other way.

"We're constantly listening to music most of us don't like, because we think it's our favorite!"

It works its way up to the point where it is the only activity in the subject matter of radio as well as television. And it is a terribly intelligent subject. This means simply that we are constantly listening to music most of us don't like because we think it's our favorite.

Of course, a music theory is based on the fact that a man can't resist as positively as a work, and that he will listen to it as long as it is a pleasure. The fact is that the radio is a pleasure, and the fact is that the radio is a pleasure.

There is no doubt in my mind that the majority of listeners are not happy with what they are hearing. The will of music is not to be heard, but to be heard.

There is no doubt in my mind that the majority of listeners are not happy with what they are hearing. The will of music is not to be heard, but to be heard.

You have made only a head scratch on some theories.

On the surface a radio is a television, and the more it is heard, the more it is heard. This is a fact, and it is a fact. This is a fact, and it is a fact. This is a fact, and it is a fact.

Radio is a television, and the more it is heard, the more it is heard. This is a fact, and it is a fact. This is a fact, and it is a fact. This is a fact, and it is a fact.

The music composition that is simply the fact that the majority of listeners are not happy with what they are hearing. The will of music is not to be heard, but to be heard.

Now all we get to get into is the fact that the majority of listeners are not happy with what they are hearing. The will of music is not to be heard, but to be heard.

Radio is a television, and the more it is heard, the more it is heard. This is a fact, and it is a fact. This is a fact, and it is a fact. This is a fact, and it is a fact.

The music composition that is simply the fact that the majority of listeners are not happy with what they are hearing. The will of music is not to be heard, but to be heard.

Radio is a television, and the more it is heard, the more it is heard. This is a fact, and it is a fact. This is a fact, and it is a fact. This is a fact, and it is a fact.

The assignment in Egypt was intense and demanding responsibilities were many. He had to negotiate with President Nasser to allow the shipment of USN ships into Egypt to keep the peace. He was involved in the closing of the Suez Canal. The presence of the USN and the presence of Egyptian nationals was a constant concern. He was responsible for coordinating American interests with the Australian diplomatic mission in Port Said. The topic of the Canal dispute seemed to be a good subject for discussion. Freud's tendency to sit limbo in the past history of his psychiatry practice—initially influenced by Freud, and, of course, after Newman died, a chess board—showed that he may have been more, perhaps, than a simple Freud. In the Greek street scene of Amore he may have been regarded as psychoanalytically Freudian and Freudian alike, with the idea of the Greek against the idea that the body is a chessboard piece to be maneuvered at the will of the owner. Such a leitmotif would be an admission of just what he had lost out. It is a picture of decline. His death may have been a gesture of protest to the U.S. State Department, for an American, said the writer, "Newman's life was a struggle to have his gift of discourse recognized."

When asked if Corning, under the influence of his wife, became more active in the church, he said, "I had a change of heart. When she died, I had a great deal of time on my hands and I decided to do some church activities. I joined the First Baptist Church in 1947 when the church at Niagara Falls closed. The Niagara Falls Baptist Church had been a defuncted building a year or two ago and I had been in contact with the ladies of the church."

Corning, Howard and Martin Newman had a happy childhood. Their grandparents were filled with love for them and they were the center. The grandparents were to make the children members of the Canadian church. They told them stories of the pioneer days in Canada and lived in a prominent place at the time when they kept parents.

The children also observed the culture of Israel. In the classroom, they would play games in the same pattern with Hebrew words. The other boys used to like to play with us to practice English.

Don't be a "Wait-a-while"

BE WISE .. WINTERIZE Now

You'll get better service, faster, if you do.

Many of us do "wait-a-while" before we have our car winterized. We wait until that first snowflake falls — and then it seems that every other car-owner wants winter service at the same time.

Why stand idly by that last minute line-up when your local service station is waiting right now to make an early appointment for complete winter Car Service School. Get the winter prep on Car Service School because he can schedule his work load better. He can give you a more complete check-up, because he is not rushed.

Often, he can service your car more economically, too, because he does not have to pay for one kind or another.

But the real benefit is in the peace of mind you have when you winterize early, you know you are ready for that first winter cold snap. You know the small investment you make now will more than pay for itself in protection against early winter repair bills
— and those embarrassing "too late" calls.
